

Heritage week for fur trade Fidlers

Two hundred and five years after their ancestor, fur trader and explorer Peter Fidler, trod the hills and canoed the waters along the North Saskatchewan, a large group of his descendants gathered in Elk Point this past weekend to trace their branches of the family tree and celebrate their proud heritage.

Descendant Caron Russell welcomed all those who gathered Saturday morning at the foot of the statue honoring their forefather, and said it was "wonderful to realize that the Fidlers were such diverse and prolific people." The absence due to illness of adopted family member Louis "Little Fidler" Verhagen, who spearheaded the organization of the reunion, was reported by Ms Russell, who acknowledged that "Louis is in all our hearts and minds."

Peggy Fidler-Zaraska in for Verhagen and brought the group his greetings and regrets at being unable to attend. She also brought greetings from Audrey Poitras, president of the Metis Nation of Alberta, and introduced the special guests in attendance. These included Mary Fidler, who came all the way from Bolsover, Derbyshire, England, Fidler's birthplace; Charles Denny of England, who is known as "the grandfather of Metis genealogy," and two other renown Metis genealogists, Gail Morin of Elmer City, Washington, USA and Geoff Burtonshaw of Calgary.

Ms Fidler-Zaraska proudly displayed a plaque which was to be presented to Verhagen from the Metis Nation of Canada, in appreciation of his ongoing efforts, signed by Mrs. Poitras and vice president Ken Borque.

Ms Morin said that while she is not a Fidler descendant, she is very interested in all Metis history and was happy to attend the gathering. Burtonshaw is "an honorary member of several fur trade families, Sometimes I wake up and can't remember who I am."

Elderly historian Charles Denny felt "this may be the last time I can attend one of your reunions. I am privileged to have met so many of you." Denny has a vast knowledge of Metis genealogy, gleaned from "thousands of miles, and hundreds of graveyards" in his research, and his writings make up a valued part of the DESCENDANTS of fur trader and Hudson's Bay fort builder Peter Fidler from as far away as England, renowned Metis genealogists and other special guests gathered at the Fidler statue on Saturday morning for a photo session as part of their weekend reunion. This is the third in a series of Fidler reunions that started during the Bicentennial of Fort George and Buckingham House in 1992. A second reunion was held in 1994.

Mad Scientist fires up imagination

Whoever said that science is dull and boring? The Mad Scientist who set up shop in the Seniors' Recreation Centre last week courtesy of the Northern Lights Library System proved that the scientific world can be truly fascinating.

From his combusive card tricks, to his trinitro cellulose that burned 120 times faster than normal paper and much faster than a camera shutter can click, to the mysterious means of getting an egg in and out of a flask, the wild-haired master of the scientific arts kept his young audience interested and enthused while Northern Lights' "Dr. Linda" kept a close eye on the proceedings.

But it was his dry ice experiments that really amazed the youngsters, who were mostly part of the group who attend the READiscover Summer Reading Program at the library. He touched a room-temperature screwdriver to a thick-gloved handful of the substance, and the children listened raptly to the sizzle as it sublimated. He put chunks into a balloon, which was inflated by the gas emanating as the dry ice turned to carbon dioxide gas. He carbonated a liquid, offered everyone a taste of the gas which spewed out of the flask, and closed off the flask so it popped the cork in a manner that would put champagne to shame. Then he dumped some into a blue solution to which his 'magic green solution' (dish soap?) had been added, and made mountains of soap bubbles.

The grand finale was something usually seen only at rock concerts and in theatrical special effects. In the darkened room, a spotlight played on a bucket of hot water and the circle of young faces around it. When the Scientist dumped in a kilogram of dry ice, the cloud of fog billowed up and over, surrounding them all in mystery.

Winners of the door prize draws for two posters were Shelley Astill and Alex Buck.

Buddy Bensmiller wins World Professional wagon championship

The World Professional Chuckwagon Association has a new king.

Buddy Bensmiller of Dewberry was named their 1997 champion Monday night in Strathmore after an exciting eighth heat dash for cash at the conclusion of their final meet of the season.

The win was a surprise, after six-time World champion Kelly Sutherland crossed the finish line in 1:14.73, almost a second and a half ahead of Bensmiller's 1:16.21. However, Sutherland's haste cost him a total of four seconds in penalties, one second for starting with his wagon ahead of the barrel and three more for wagon interference, for a total of 1:18.73.

Right on Bensmiller's tailgate were Jason Glass with 1:16.31 and Herman Flad, 1:16.45.

In total times for the four day final show, Bensmiller was 7/100 of a second slower than Sutherland, with Tyler Helmig third and Tom Glass fourth. He was fourth in the line for Monday's fastest time, which was a new track record set by Edgar Baptiste, clocking in at 1:15.71. Troy Dorchester, with 1:15.96 in the same heat as Baptiste, and rookie Colt Cosgrave, with 1:16.13, were second and third day money winners.

Fidler descendants trace their ancestry

Glenbow Museum's archives. Mary Fidler added her greetings, and introduced Bruno Sanregret of Cold Lake, widower of one of the oldest Fidler descendants.

Following an afternoon which offered canoe trips led by Pat Johnson from Elk Point Bridge to the Fort George and Buckingham House Interpretive Centre's river landing, and ample opportunity to access the Fidler genealogy on Verhagen's computer, the Fidler descendants gathered at the Seniors Recreation Centre for a banquet and dance.

Blaine Easthope, a genealogist who had offered his services to operate Verhagen's computer, told the descendants that Verhagen had first set out to search for his own roots, but after encountering "dead ends," decided during the planning for the 1992 Fort George and Buckingham House Bicentennial celebrations to put his expertise toward creating a Fidler family tree. He now has over 17,000 names entered in the computer, and Easthope said that one descendant had found twelve generations of ancestors in the computer's memory bank that afternoon. He praised Charles Denny for his extensive work, and said that "through the diligent work of these Metis genealogists," it has been made much easier for these people to trace their ancestry.

"We owe Louis a lot, Easthope concluded. "We all need to remember the guy who adopted you as his family, and remember him in your prayers."

Verhagen's sudden trip to the hospital on Friday threw Gene Russell and Peggy Fidler-Zaraska, both already deep in preparations, into the forefront of the event. Both ladies did a fine job of filling in for the ailing Verhagen.

Following the banquet, Mary Fidler was presented with a braid of sweetgrass and a native-design vase by Carl Fidler of Cold Lake and Caron Russell, on behalf of her Canadian relatives.

The festivities carried on into the evening with music by August Collins and the Half Breed Band, but everyone was up bright and early on Sunday, when the Friends of Fort George and Buckingham House hosted them at an outdoor breakfast at the Interpretive Centre. Tours of the centre and another opportunity to canoe down the river with Friends president Pat Johnson, were also on Sunday's schedule.

DIGGING UP ROOTS to the Fidler family tree is a strong interest for (l-r) Geoff Burtonshaw, Calgary, Peggy Fidler-Zaraska, Elk Point, Charles Denny, Edmonton, Mary Fidler, Bolsover, England, and Gail Morin, Washington State.

Our heritage — lest we forget

By Deanna Easthope
FCSS Director

Monday, August 4 is marked on our calendars as a Civic Holiday. I remember when Alberta first started declaring the first Monday in August as a holiday. It was called "Heritage Day." The purpose was to help us acknowledge our heritage. In fact, at that time there was a special department created in the Provincial Government of Alberta to help Albertans develop an appreciation for their heritage. Then, in Edmonton, the Heritage Festival began taking place the first weekend in August. People from many cultural and ethnic backgrounds have booths which include their food and other interesting displays. All of this helps us to learn about other people.

I could go on, I am sure as we think about it, most of us will remember other cultural projects that have been developed in Alberta that help us to learn about other people.

Anyway, locally, can you identify all the different cultural and ethnic backgrounds of the people who live in our area?

This has been brought to my attention as I have been reading the tombstones in all the graveyards located in the County of St. Paul. Tombstones have been written in English, Ukrainian, German and French. These were the main languages, but the places these people came from really had their heritage roots in several countries.

The sad part is the conditions of some graveyards and the condition of some tombstones. The writing on some of them is so faint, it became impossible to guess what it really said. Other graves had no tombstones or markers, so we didn't know who was buried there. Some graves are in forgotten places.

To remember a person who once lived and was involved in our lives makes the "cycle of life" meaningful.

When I read the tombstones of soldiers, some stones would say at the bottom, "Lest We Forget." We always seem to only use this phrase with soldiers because it helps us remember the great contribution they made in fighting for freedom. However, after reading the tombstones in all the graveyards, I have come to the conclusion that we need not forget any of the people who are buried in our graveyards. Everyone made some contribution of value.

Some stories about these people are found in our local history books. Thank goodness, some of that information is written down.

But graveyards, even though they contain a reminder of our past, need to be looked after by the present people who are living. They really are our heritage — lest we forget.

4-H club members seize the day!

4-H clubs from all across Alberta selected and sent delegates to Olds, July 21 to 26, 1997 to discover how to Seize the Day. Some 145 senior 4-H members participated in personal development sessions, group challenges and motivational activities, all part of Club Week 1997. The outstanding program was sponsored by United Grain Growers, Lammle's Western Wear, Alberta Pool and Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development.

The Club Week theme was "Between the Bookends." Bookends represent flexibility and the building of a library of life experiences which can be added to and drawn from over the course of one's existence. 4-H members explored the meaning of this theme in small group sessions. Session topics included family, self awareness, friendship, values and Canada. Carolyn Arends' song, "Seize the Day" captured the energy of participants and became the 1997 Club Week theme song.

Local 4-H members Marci Bintz, Elk Point, Shane Saskiw, Two Hills, Jackie Yackimec, Beauvallon; and Ivan Babiuk, Willingdon had a terrific week while learning about the importance of goals.

A highlight of Club Week was the Celebration of Diversity. It was during this evening that delegates met a diverse array of inspirational individuals. This year tornado survivor Wade Cooper, Aboriginal mountain climber Paulette Fox, visually impaired speaker Ella Iantkow, and hearing impaired couple Robin and Sean Demko related dynamic accounts of their life challenges and experiences. The encounter had a significant impact on each of the 4-H members and staff.

Many Club Week events were planned by the delegates. 4-Hers used their leadership and organizational skills to arrange the mini-Olympics, masquerade dance, morning news and exercises, banquet and final dance. Participation in physical and leisure activities such as volleyball, soccer, candle and angel making allowed the members to use their creativity and energy. There was no shortage of enthusiasm, either!

"This is a special program," boasts Marguerite Stark, Provincial 4-H Programs Specialist with Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. "Club Week is often a life changing experience for the individuals who have the opportunity to attend."

The fantasy journey on the last day revisited the events of the past week and encouraged the delegates to continue to make the most of each day once the program was over. Club Week is an annual program for 4-H members 15 to 21 years of age.

TIC talk

By Sherry Pelech
Tourist Information Clerk

The Tourist Information Centre (TIC) exists for the purpose of giving answers, so naturally we get asked a lot of questions. One of the more peculiar (and we do get some doozies) was asked by a woman the other day. She came into the TIC, looked around and said, "Is there anything to see north of Edmonton?"

To which we replied, "Excuse me?"

"Anything to look at? You know? You got any tourist attractions?"

We paused as we thought about what this person would consider a 'tourist attraction.' Half a pineapple filled with a $10 cocktail and a paper umbrella? A sweat soaked scarf worn by the late (or whatever) Elvis Presley? Maybe a footprint fossilized in bedrock from the late Flintstone Era? In that case, no, we have nothing for her.

If on the other hand, she is interested in incredible scenery, we have trees, hills, creeks, rivers, valleys, flowers and lakes. In fact we have some of the most beautiful countryside in all of Canada — make that the world.

If she is interested in history, we have museums, Provincial Historic Sites and Interpretive Centres. And fur trade history going back to the late 1700s. And native history and culture going back 20,000 years.

If she is interested in animals, we have those too. Deer, moose, elk, bear, coyotes, wolves, gophers, porcupines, squirrels, foxes, badgers, beaver. Hey, we have buffalo. And birds. Over 200 different species just at Borden Lake.

If she is interested in curiosities and human interest, we have plenty of that too. Our own Mural and Peter Fidler statue, Glendon's big white Pyrogy on a Fork, Vilna's Giant Mushrooms, St. Paul's UFO Landing Pad, and don't forget Andrew's Great Big Duck.

Yeah, there's something to see north of Edmonton. You only have to ask.

Legion track medal for local athlete

Julie Whiffen-Peters of Elk Point was among 250 young athletes from Alberta and the North West Territories attending the Royal Canadian Legion Track and Field Camp in Calgary, July 20 to 25.

Julie took part in discus, javelin and shot put, and after two days of training and two days of competition, was presented with the bronze medal in discus. Discus is a new facet of track and field competition for the F. G. Miller High School student, although she has done well at high school track meets in other events, her favorite being the long jump. Her attendance at the camp was sponsored in part by the Elk Point Royal Canadian Legion.

Julie also competed at the Alberta Summer Games in Lloydminster, in the 16 and Under category of shot put, discus, 400 M, javelin and relay, placing fifth with the relay team and sixth in javelin.

SUMMER GAMES SUMMARY

Other local youths participating in the Alberta Summer Games were Scott Swain, who was part of the fourth place Under 16 Softball team, Chad West, who was on the seventh place basketball team, and three equestrians.

Joan Wheat of Marwayne took part in junior barrels, junior flag picking, junior poles and the Junior keyhole race, where she placed sixth.

Jamie Schnurer took part in junior trail (bronze), junior western riding (bronze), junior western pleasure (sixth) and junior stock seat equitation.

Ashley Larson of Dewberry won gold in junior stock seat equitation, junior trail and junior western riding and silver in junior western pleasure.

JULIE WHIFFEN-PETERS -- medal winner at Legion Sports Camp.

Nutrition notes

Constipation more common than you think!

By Shelley Miller-Hertes,
RD
Lakeland Regional Health Authority

Constipation is a common problem, especially for older adults. Before one rushes out to buy medicinal remedies, consider your diet, specifically your fiber intake.

The typical North American diet contains 10 to 20 grams of dietary fiber per day. Current information suggests an optimal diet contain 20 to 35 grams of fiber per day. It takes a while for your body to get accustomed to more fiber. Fiber should be increased gradually over several weeks, and should be distributed evenly throughout the day to reduce the occurrence of abdominal distension and flatulence. A fluid intake of 1.5 to 2 litres is encouraged to reduce the adverse symptoms associated with an increase in fiber intake.

Some tips for adding fiber to your diet:

- * Try stewed prunes at breakfast.

- * Whole grain cereals add bulk to the diet and help keep bowels regular.

- * Beans, oat bran, and some fruits contain gel-forming fiber that helps to lower blood cholesterol. This gel-forming fiber may help with blood sugar control in diabetics.

- * Add cereal bran to pancakes, muffins, cookies, hamburger, and casseroles. Sprinkle it on desserts and cereal.

- * Consume at least 4 to 5 servings of fruits and vegetables daily. Eat the skins that are edible. Substitute whole fruit for juices.

- * Add dried fruits to cereal and baked products.

- * When baking, substitute whole wheat flour for half the white flour.

- * Read nutrition labels when shopping. Choose foods with at least 2 grams dietary fiber per serving.

- * For bowel regularity include regular exercise and practice regular bowel habits (don't ignore the normal urge).

This high fiber recipe is very good on toast, crackers, ice cream, in hot cereal, etc. It's quite tasty!

What's news at the library?

Mad scientist on the loose, courtesy of Northern Lights System

By Michele Ducek
Librarian

Forty one enthralled children and a number of adults made up the audience on Wednesday as the Northern Lights Library System presented "Mad Science," an entertaining look at science. The kids were introduced to the four steps of scientific exploration: observation, hypothesis, experimentation and conclusion, and learned about chemical reactions, equilibrium and sublimation. Two lucky kids, Shelley Astill and Alex Buck, went home with posters and a good time was had by all. A special thanks to Lillian Palinka and the Pioneer Circle who graciously donated the use of the Seniors' Recreation Centre for the event and allowed us to dispossess the bingo players for an afternoon.

Here are a few more titles in juvenile fiction to help you while away the rest of the summer:

Sarah isn't having a good time at camp and now something is stalking her in The Curse of Camp Cold Lake from Goosebumps.

Jessica and Elizabeth are invited to audition for a movie and find out that the competition will do anything to get the part in The Twins Hit Hollywood from Sweet Valley Twins.

The girls head west to a ranch and discover there is such a thing as too much riding in Saddle Sore from the Saddle Club.

A computer virus may have led to murder as Scully and Mulder investigate in Ghost in the Machine from the X-Files.

A baby dolphin is kidnapped and held for ransom and Nancy must find the kidnapper before it is too late in Natural Enemies from the Nancy Drew Files.

The last thing Harriet expects to meet in her father's wheat field is a talking hare from outer space but he quickly becomes the best friend she ever had in Harriet's Hare by Dick King-Smith.

And here are some juvenile nonfiction in keeping with our READiscover science theme:

Learn all about gorillas in Gorillas: Gentle Giants of the Forest, a Step Into Reading Book by Joyce Milton and Bryn Bernard.

I Wonder Why Stars Twinkle and Other Questions About

Space by Carole Stott is a wonderful introduction to astronomy and outer space with loads of interesting information and activities.

I Wonder Why Soap Makes Bubbles and Other Questions About Science by Barbara Taylor introduces children to all sorts of interesting science facts and has a number of activities for them to try as well.

READiscover goes visiting

By Karina Mitchell
READiscover Coordinator

We went looking for bugs at Whitney Lakes Provincial Park, and we were not disappointed. With a wonderful enthusiasm that children do best, we donned our rubber boots, grabbed our nets and ventured into the muck. And we were rewarded with backswimmers, tiny shrimp, minnows and lots of frogs, all of which were explained to us by our provincial park interpreter, Wendy Harrison. She took time to talk about the different stages of a bug's life and passed on some interesting facts about life in the swampy water. Did you know that the thread worm lays its eggs with the hopes of being mistakenly eaten by a grasshopper? It does this so it can stay incubated until they are ready to hatch, at which time they cause the poor grasshopper to go into the water and explode, setting free the baby thread worms. We were assured they are of no harm to people, but only to small insects. We all learned something and had a great time. Thanks again to Wendy for her enthusiasm to READiscover with us!

I also owe a great big thank you to the parents that volunteered their time to drive us all out there. Especially those not too keen on exploring bugs. Your support is really appreciated. We can't do it without you. Thanks!

And that was just Thursday's group. On Tuesday, we went with the younger children to Fins, Feathers and Furry Things. There we watched eels and fish swimming, met the ferrets and hung out with a few birds. Everyone was really excited to get the hands on experience. And nothing tried to bite! The gang at Fins, Feathers and Furry Things were great and we thank you for allowing us to spend our afternoon there!

Elk Point Detachment goes "on line"

By Sgt. Peter Sherstan
Elk Point RCMP

The RCMP at Elk Point can now be contacted via the Internet, thanks to its community partners at the Elks Lodge #460 and Norcen Energy Resources Limited.

The eMail address is epcops@telusplanet.net. Pictured are Kevin Casper of Norcen Energy Resources and Randy Ballas of the Elk Point Elks. Norcen donated an 486 computer system for the use of the detachment on this project while the Elks financed the necessary upgrades to the system that allowed it to become Internet ready.

It is the intention of the Elk Point Detachment dedicated to the affairs of this area. It would eventually include crime and traffic statistics, information on community programs, member profiles, and maybe even "Elk Point's Most Wanted." Development of this Web Site will be done locally by the members and is targeted for release in the late fall.

GOING SURFING? Randy Ballas, Sgt. Peter Sherstan and Kevin Casper check out the new technology offered by going on-line.
